Carpinteria Creek Watershed Coalition Celebration

The Carpinteria Creek Watershed Coalition (CCWC) will be celebrating its 11 year anniversary this month. Please join us Saturday, September 15th from 11:00am - 2:00pm, at Carpinteria's Linden Field adjacent to Tomol Park. Join local CCWC members including: Channel Islands Restoration, The City of Carpinteria, The California Conservation Corps, The County of Santa Barbara Agricultural Commissioners office and SCHR to learn about the importance of the Carpinteria Creek Watershed, and hear about the restoration efforts that have occurred in the watershed. There will be educational information, children's activities, light refreshments and a tour of the Carpinteria Creek mouth restoration project. The event is free and open to the public, parking is available along Linden Ave. We hope to see you there.

For more information on the CCWC check out their website at carpinteriacreek.org

The mission of South Coast Habitat Restoration is to protect, conserve, and restore the various habitats and native biodiversity of Santa Barbara and Ventura counties.

CREATURE FEATURE: TIDEWATER GOBY (Eucyclogobius newberryi)

The Tidewater goby (Eucyclogobius newberryi) is a member of the goby family (Gobiidae) and is a federally endangered species. Tidewater gobies are native to lagoons and estuaries from the Oregon border down to the Mexican border. Adult tidewater gobies have the ability to survive in freshwater, high salinity environments, anoxic conditions, and high oxygen conditions. This small fish species is around two inches in length and much of their body is often transparent. Male tidewater gobies usually have a mottled gray, brown, or olive upper surface, while female tidewater gobies tend to be darker on their bodies, dorsal and anal fins. The tidewater goby has scales that are smooth, contain almost no bone, and are difficult to see without a microscope. Tidewater gobies also have a transparent white or yellow triangular area on the upper portion of their first dorsal fin. Unlike most other gobies, tidewater gobies display a female-dominant breeding system, where females spar with each other for the opportunity to lay their eggs in a male's burrow. Once a female lays her eggs, the male cares for the eggs in his burrow until they hatch. On average, most individuals only live for about a year and may reproduce more than once.

Refugio Creek Mouth Restoration

SCHR will be working with project partners over the next few months to finalize the project contracts for the Refugio Creek Mouth Restoration site. The goal of the project is to increase the habitat and ecological value of the mouth of Refugio Creek through the removal of non-native vegetation and planting of native vegetation along the banks.

Native seed has been collected from the site and plants are being grown for the project. The native vegetation will provide shade for the creek and over hanging cover habitat for aquatic species, as well as forage and nesting habitat for native birds. The project will begin with the non native removal this Fall to prepare the site for native planting during the Fall and Winter rainy season. Stay tuned for upcoming volunteer planting events.

For more information check out the project blog at <http://refugiocreekmouth.blogspot.com/>

Ventura River Clean Up!

In partnership with the Ventura Hillside's Conservancy (VHC) and Patagonia, SCHR will be coordinating a river clean up in the lower Ventura River on Sunday, September 23rd from 9:00am - 12:00pm. The event will take place along VHC's property, south of the Main Street

VOLUNTEERS HELPING OUT AT A CREEK CLEAN UP IN CARPINTERIA CREEK

Bridge and north of the 101 Freeway. The Ventura Hillside's Conservancy has been working over the last month to remove non native Giant Cane or Arundo from the area. Removal of the Arundo will allow clean up crews to more easily come in and remove trash and homeless debris as well as allow for native plants to re-colonize the river banks. We will meet at the free parking lot off West Main street, between Hwy 33 and the Ventura River at 9:00am. Please wear appropriate attire, bring water and sunscreen. For more information or to RSVP for this event contact us at info@schabitatrestoration.org.

California Association of RCDs Conference

The 67th Annual California Association of Resource Conservation Districts (RCD) will be held November 14th-17th in San Diego, at the Paradise Point Resort. This year's Conference is entitled: "The Future of Conservation: New Strategies for a Changing World". The conference will provide a forum for organizations to share conservation tools and strategies.

SCHR will be giving two presentations at this year's conference. SCHR Director Mauricio Gomez will be presenting on our efforts in the Carpinteria Creek Watershed and Project Manager Erin Brown will be presenting on the Tajiguas Watershed. Registration is now open if you are interested in attending. For more information visit CARCD.org/

Pinkham Project Delayed

SCHR is still working on a barrier removal project along Carpinteria Creek. Unfortunately because of some delays in obtaining the necessary permits we will be pushing the project back until the 2013 construction season. We will continue to give updates on the project as things progress and we look forward to removing the barrier next Fall.
